Dual Between a Prussiau Nobieman

and an Austrian Count. The London Morning Fost reports that great excitement has been caused at Berlin by a duel which has taken place in that capital which threatens to place in that capital which threatens to terminate fatily for one of the combatants. Come Mayinz Holesthal a Prussian and Count Uxskyll, military attache to the Austrian legation at Derlin, to the Austrian legation of Derlin, having tad a quarrel of so serious a nature that a pacific settlement was considered out of question, lought with pistols in the grunewald, a wood in the immediate vicini y of Berlin, and Coun Ux-kyll fell, having been shot in the hip. He was at once removed to his own residence and medical assistance was promptly propered. The celebrated surgeon, Baron Langenbuk was sent for, but efforts to extract the ball were unaviling and it appears even to have been impossible to trace the course which it had taken. Count Moritz Hohen bal's econd was Baron Oer zen, and Count Uxskyll was attended by Prince Frederick Wittgenstein, a Prussian officer-well known to many in this country as naving accompanied the last British expedition to China The Post adds; We believe that, as is too often the case in affairs of this sort, a lady was the cause of this unhappy quarrel. We have not yet heard whether Count Hohenthal has been arrested, but even it he be in custody and the duel should prove to have terminated fatally for his antagonist, there is every reason to belive that will meet with the same indul gent leniency which is shown in Prussia to all who have the mistorium to take the life of a fellow creature in an affair Mest people will remember of honor. the Hinckoldey duel, and the very elight punishment, which was awarded to Here von Rochow

An article 'ermed 'compressed leather' is now manufactured of the waste leather of shoe factories and saddlery establishments by first cleaning it from dirt and other foreign substances, then cutting it into fine shreds, with the waste of raw hides, and immersing in water containing one per cent of sulphyric acid until the whole forms a plastic pulb, which can then be present plastic pulb, which can then be pressed into moulds of the desired size. After these have been dried by means of steam, the masses are passed between rollers, one of which is rough and the other smooth, for the purpose of producing surfaces in imitation of flash and grain sides of the leather. To render the whole plable, one pound of glycer-ine is added for each one hundred pounds of material. For many purpo es, as for soles of shoes, etc., this artful substance completely replaces the natural leather, and can be sold at a much cheaper rute.

Prince Plerre Bonaparte will be de-fended at his trial by M. Emile Le Roux and M. Demange, who though only in his 28th year, is spoken of as a worthy rival in ability and tact of the famous Maitre Luchaud. A story is current relative to the Emperor's feelings with respect to the trial. His Medesty has, it is said publicly, stated his expectation that the Prince would be acquitted, as there were strong grounds for believing that he had been really struck first.

The Responsible Debate.

The debate which took place in the Legislative Council upon the proposition to inaugurate Responsible Government in this colony, coincidently with its admission into the Dominion of Canada, was unquestionably the most able and interesting of the session. There can now be little doubt that the Governor was, to a considerable extent, misled on this question by his Executive advisors: this question by his Executive advisors; and His Excellency must now see that his Government has been placed in a false position. If he does not see this now, he will assuredly see it hereafter. It is perfectly clear that the predominating feeling is in favor of Kesponsible Covernment under Confederation. People are naturally averse to being placed in a false and disadvantageous position as compared with the other Provinces; and very many persons will object to any union which does not place us on a political equality with those it is pro-posed to join, in so far as the management of our local affairs is concerned. To point to the scattered and heterogeneous character of the population is not a conclusive answer. The people may be scattered, and there may be an absence of that homogeneousness which one could wish to see; but it does not follow on that account that people living on the opposite rim of the continent know better how to manage our local affairs than we do ourselves. The fact of the matter is many think that no terms of union can be fair and equitable which do not give the people of this colony as large political rights as have been conferred upon the other Provinces. We have no hesitation in asserting that no union will be acceptable or satisfactory which places us in a false and inferior which places us in a false and inferior which places us a false and inferior which places us in a false and inferior which places us in a false and inferior which places us a false and inferior which places us in a false and inferior which places are placed in England, and diotated the recommendation of the Commissioners do not exist here, and also that the reasons position. Were British Columbia contiguous to the other Provinces with which it is proposed to unite there would be less objection to leaving matters very much in Federal hands; but the great distance which separates us and the absence of facile communication form strong reasons why we should have as full powers of self-government as may be compatible with the Consti-The Executive made a sad mistake in arriving at the conclusion it did upon this subject; and the large representative vote east in favor of Responsible Government—virtually six to one—affords the Governor an excellent opportunity of gracefully extricating himself from the awkward position in wice tendered to him by those who have for the most part a sort of innate abhorrence of giving power to the people. By giving way now the Gov-ernor will not only render more certain the acceptance of the Terms which may be agreed to at Ottawa, but he will remove a germ of discord and discontent which threatens to endanger the fature peace of the country.

The Land Registry Ordinance.

EDITOR BRITISH COLONIST :- In a letter which appeared in your impression of the 15th instant, I endeavoured to show that the proposed Ordinance respecting the registra-tion of titles is bad in principle. lst, Because it makes registration essential to the validity of instruments affecting the tirle to land, and as a consequence opens a wide door to fraud. 20d, Because the interests of beneficiaries will not appear on the Register, and thus ene of two consequences may follow, that is to say, either such interests may be sacrificed, or if preserved their preservation it will be at the expense of the party who may purchase the land, and who will have no means of secertaining beforehand the existence of such 3rd, Because too much power is given to the Registrar. He is made a judicial, not merely a ministertal officer; he becomes a Registrar of Titles, not merely of deeds, and his mistakes are irremediable after the lapse of a certain time.

Your readers will remember that the hon

Attorney General, in moving the first reading of the Ordinance in question, stated that it was based upon the recommendation of the Commissioners appointed by Her Maj sty to consider the subject of the Re-gistration of Tiles with reference to the sale and transfer of land, and generally to inquire into the advantages and disadvantages of such a system. This circumstance naturally enough will commend the measure very any enough win commend the measure very strongly to the support of the Council, and it is because I am sensible of this that I desire before proceeding to suggest the scheme which, in my humble judgment is adapted to the Colony, to show that the recommendation of the Commissioners was dictated by a state of things that does not, and in all human probability never will exist because in all human probability never will, exist here in al human probability never will, exist here, and was designed to do away with certain great evils resulting from such a state of trings. This will be apparent from the following brief statement of the difficulties in the way of investigating a title at the time the Commissioners made their report. There was then no such thing as a record in law of the derivation of a title, except title deeds, and of course there was no security against such title deeds being suppressed or improperly witheld. A retrospective invesagainst such the deeds being suppressed or improperly witheld. A retrospective investigation of title was therefore necessary on every occasion of a sale or mortgage in order to eatisfy the purchaser or mortgage that the intending vendor or mortgagor was the owner, and that no qualifying rights existed. A vendor had to give a detailed account of every transaction that had affected the right and the right of the results of the results. the file at any time during half a century, and before he could clearly establish his title it might be necessary to prove every birth, narriage, set lement charge, conveyance or enoumbrance that might possibly affect the title. The evils of such a state of things could scarcely be exaggerated, fraudulent fitles might be made by the suppression of title deeds. The possibility of a title being impeached could never be excluded. Deeds might be lost and in such a case there was no permanent evidence of them.

The expense of examining and conveying intricate titles afflicted with all sorts of charge and encumbrances was oppressive in the extreme. These and a variety of other conditions so fettered and impeded the alienation of real estate that a impeded the alienation of real center that a new system seemed imperatively necessary. Accordingly the Commissioners sought to devise a scehme that would at once obviate those evils, simplify titles and conveyances and render retrospective inquiries into titles unnecessary. Among other plans that they had under coasideration was that of Registering conveyances in full, but as they show in their second services. their report such a system would not do in instruments it was estimated would amount to about 1000 per diem. It must be remembered that conveyances are larger and more intricate in England than her?.

2nd, Because the general law of real property would have to be altered before the Registration of deeds etc., would tend to remove technicalities and anomalies.

3rd, Because the system of Registering deeds would not render unnecessary the retropective investigation of title; and this was one of the chief requirements of a new system in the opinion of the Commissioners. system in the opinion of the Commissioners.

The Commissioners therefore disapproved of the plan in question, and decided upon another scheme, some of the principal features of which are embodied in the Ordinance

tures of which are embodied in the Ordinance now before the Council.

It is only right to notice the disclosures made in the Commissioners' report, to the effect that one of the number, the present Chief Justice of England, refused to concur in the recommendation and that several there are all there are there. others, qualified their assent thereto. also appears that the scheme was contrary to the opinions of many eminent barristers and solicitors, whose views on the subject were elicited by a series of questions circulated among the legal profession of England and Ireland; and leasily I believe I am correct in saving that whatever may be the rect in saying that whatever may be the merits of the scheme, it was never carried as 1857.

It is thus apparent that the special reasons which existed in England, and dictated the recommendation of the Commissioners do not exist here, and also that the reasons assigned by them for their disapproval of a system of Registration in full of all instruments affecting land are inapplicable to British Columbia.

The Ordinance before the Council consequently losses all the advantage it would quently loses all the advantage it would otherwise derive from the authority of the names of those who worked out the original plan upen which it is based, and hon members in censidering it, will therefore, I believe, judge of it by its intrinsic merits (if it have any and not adopt it unless they can have any) and not adopt it unless they can nave any and not adopt it unless they can see clearly that it is suited to the exigencies of British Columbia. I have already advanced a few arguments to show that it is not suited to British Columbia. I will, in concluding this letter, add to one of those reasons, viz, the inexp-diency of making the Registrar a judicial office, the weight of a well-known English convexance. well-known English conveyancer's opinion. cited with approbation by the Commissioners in their report:—'I (set sure,' says Mr Kettle, that there is no feeling more strongly rooted terference with their private affairs, and any system is practically impossible, however theoretically perfect, which would render the approval or sanction of a Registrar necessary bim any discretionary power to prevent them.' for the completion of transfers, or would give

In a subsequent letter, I will speak of such a scheme as, in my judgment. will adapted to the colony. OBSERVER.

Legislative Council.

Monday, March 22nd, 1870. . RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT. Mr Holbrook said that under responsible Mr Holbrook said that under responsible government the Legislature would be in the hands of the Victoriaus, to the prejudice of the rest of the colony. He alluded to the Legislature of Vancouver's Island before Unio, and spoke of it as being disgraceful, and with such a Legislature under Coolederation he thought the Mainland interests would not be cared for. He said the capital and beach them. had been taken from New Westminis er and this, it carried out, would now complete the ruin of the Mainland. He said the principle of responsible government was good, but with a small community like ours it would with a small community like ours it would work injuriously. He complained of the terms generally giving advantage to Victoria over New Westminster, and said the people would have to look to Canada for justice. He would prefer to be governed from England with responsible government, but with re-sponsible government under Canada, he would not be answerable for the consequen-There was a large number of our copulation who would under the change pro-posed be distranchised, and under responsible government their interests would not be protected. He thought those who were asking for responsible government were seeking place and power. He said responsible government had not worked well they were always in political trouble until they got Confederation. There was no re-sponsible government in the United States and still people preferred settling in that country to Canada. He had lived in a country when they had no responsible gov ernment, and the people were more contented and happy then where responsible government existed.

Mr. DeCosmos—Where?
Mr Holbrook—Russia. The people on the Mainland do not want responsible govern-ment, it is only a cry got up in Victoria for it in order to obtain power. He said after bearing the able speech of Mr Wood, he would not attempt to say anything more. He thought if the speech of the hon member was published and went to the world, everybody would become convinced of the fallacy of responsible government. Mr DeCosmos said the more he heard from the upper end of the table, the more he convinced that the Gavernment were asking them to take a step in the dark. They had not stated the proportion of elected members we were to have, nor the qualification of elected and electors. He thought the scheme would be endangered as he believed the people would reject Confederation without responsible government. He had posed a committee to take this matter consideration and had that been carried out a form of government might have been agreed upon and accepted by all parties. He agreed upon and accepted by an parties. He suggested that a form of government, pos-sibly the responsible element, might be adopted as an expedient by having a portion of the members of the House elected for a or the members of the rouse elected for a longer period then the others, which would afford a guarantee of an element of experience in the House. He was of the opinion that the Governor had been misled in this matter. He believed the whole scheme of Confederation was jeopardised by the course pursued by the Government. He believed responsible government.

Mr Dewdney said so much had been said on the subject that it was useless for him to say more. He was opposed to the resolution. He had yet to meet the first person in the country who had expressed a desire for responsible government. His constituents had expressed their opinion against it. ostinous expressed their opinion against it. He would take this opportunity of expressing his high appreciation of the officials of the present government. He believed that is no country were the laws better observed and executed than in this Colony.

Mr Alston said he believed in responsible would not accept union without government, but not such as had been advo-cated here—that of having the executive members elected. He would also quote John memoers elected. He would also quote John Stuart Mill who says, "different people require different forms of government," and be does not use the word responsible government at all, He said there had been no proof the best better the reache of this calcan would ment at all, He said there had been no proof to show that the people of this colony would accept responsible government as here proposed. He believed the best government was that in which the whole people particiwas that in which the whole people participated, The proper form was a representative government. It was a shame to call the present government a representative one. He thought a perfect form of government could not be sustained in this colony owing to the want of a good popular element. He endeavored to explain what he considered responsible government, pointed fout the countries which possessed it and concluded by saying he would oppose the resolution.

Mr Humphreys said he was more impressed than ever with the necessity of giving the people responsible government. The hon Chief Commissioner and the hon senior member for Victoria had proved conclusively that the people were anxious to get it. The latter had told us in the first place that the latter had told us in the first place that the people were not in favor of it, and he again told us that if this resolution were accepted as one of the Terms the people would, for the sake of getting it, accept Confederation, to the exclusion of substantial benefits. The to the exclusion of substantial benefits. The public mind was so saturated with responsible government that they could not distinguish between it and Confederation. He believed the course pursued by the government was that which would deleat Confederation.

would ask the government to grant a from and give the people a guarantee that the powers of government should not be abused. He would like to see the scheme proposed by the government carried out, but if they did not give something like responsible government they would lose Con-

Mr Robson at great length reviewed the arguments which had been advanced against responsible government, criticing with some severity the political course of the hou or Helmcken in regard to the variety of attitude assumed upon the general subject of Confederation, and hurling back with great warmth the insinuation that popular members desired responsible government as means of attaining place, power, pickings.

He resumed his seat amid applause.

Dr Carrall wished to know if anyone had disproved one of the positions he had taken—
That responsible government as practised in England was not adapted to this country?
That the paucity of population, the scattered centres and the certainty of legislation falling into the hands of the Victorians, were reasons which no man had attempted to disprove There was an element of responsibility in the government of this colony. He was re-sponsible to his people and if they disapproved of his course they would not send him here again. The government does not think that form of government adapted to this colothat form of government anapted to this color, but say that if the people need it there is a provision that it can be had under Confederation. There was no desire on the part of the Governor to withhold it from the people. He contended that the people had responsible government in this colony at the present time and hald that no manufact the provent. time, and held that no member of the govern ment could retain his position contrary to the wishes of the people. [Oh! oh! by several hon members.] Members may 'Oh, oh,' but he would assert that any member of the present government would be dismissed if any charge could be proved against him. It was said by some hon members that it would take said by some non memoers that it would take five or ten years to get responsible govern-ment after union. If that were so it was an evidence that the people did not wantit. He instanced the cases of Jamaica and Victoria and said the latter was no doubt the skeleton in the closet of responsible government. If, in in the closet of responsible government. If, in-his opposition to this measure he had taken a false step, in his progress in political life, he could only say he never wanted to take a true one in his political career. He said it was not true that responsible government, per sc, had been put before the people. The govern-ment intended to proceed into Confedera-tion with a form of government, which will tion with a form of government which will enable the people to elect what form of gov-ernment they please. They have done their best and had given good reasons for every step they have taken, and he regretted that this pree of sincerty.

Dr Helmcken said he supported the government scheme from his conviction. He was sorry to see representative institutions p'tted against responsible government. He had been charged with charging his mind. It would be found out whether he had changed his mind or not when the terms came back from

PORTLAND, March 21-No change in gold

THE ' PORT SISTER.'-The Government, a few days ago, invited tenders for the removel of one of the rocks, known as the Port Sister,' now impeding navigation and endangering life and property between Hope and Yale. The result was two tenders, but the parties are not willing to bind themseles to the completion of the work during the present season, the time being too limited. Under these circumstances the contract will not be given out now, but fresh tenders will be invited with a view to having the work do not see very well what else can be donevet it is to be regretted that the effort was EDITOR BRITISH COLONIST:—Having seen an article in your paper on the question of Immigration to British Columbia, under date of February 11th, for your information I wish to state that a number of the ten thousand men now idle in this city would be glad to emigrate to British Columbia, or any other country, to better their condition; even the most radical of the Irish, who are beginning to see they have been made tools of in this country, as they always have and will be. Now the Mongolians are doing well here, and are supplanting, in every trade and branch of business, a certain class of white people that are so fond of parading their loyally to the United States. Sir, by all means in your power, take this subject in hand and use your influence with the authorities to forward this humane object.

Hoping you will give publicity to this, Hoping you will give publicity to this,

A RARE GEM RESQUED. -- A child, while playing near Drogheda. Ireland, found a curious piece of metal which she gave to an old woman, who took it to a dealer in old iron and got a shilling for it. The dealer in his turn sold it for two pounds ten shillings, and it has finally been purchased for the Royal Irish Academy in Dublin for £300. It is the celebrated Tara Brooch, one of the most remarkable pieces of goldsmithe work known to exist, It is formed of white bronze -this probably saved it from the melting pot to which sountless treasures of gold and silver have been consigned—the surface overlaid with gold filigree work of surprising intricacy and marvelous delicacy of execution. Such is its excellence, that one of the most accomplished living goldsmiths declared that he could not find a workman, with every apparent advantage of modern knowledge and appliace, competent to make such another.
